

Ted Lewis 60th Birthday Tuesday

Tuesday Is To Be Ted Lewis Day

Local Boy Who Made Mighty Good To Be Celebrating His Birthday

Circleville's famed Ted Lewis will be 60 years old Tuesday.

And to show that he is not without honor even in his own town, local clubs plan to bombard him with birthday greeting cards and telegrams.

Mayor Thurman I. Miller has issued a proclamation setting Tuesday aside as official Ted Lewis Day in Circleville.

In his proclamation the mayor urged Circleville residents to send greetings "to the man who has sung our praises 'round the world."

"I hope," the mayor continued, "that Roundtowners will make Ted Lewis Day an annual affair."

"At present Ted is appearing in Beverly Hills Country Club in Newport, Ky., across the river from Cincinnati."

Sending birthday greeting cards and telegrams to Lewis are the following Circleville clubs and organizations:

Kiwanis, Rotary, Chamber of Commerce, Junior Chamber of Commerce and Pickaway County Federation of Women's Clubs. A large number of business houses, industries and many individual friends are expected to swell the flood of cards and telegrams.

LONG AFTER the applause had dwindled for most of his contemporaries, Ted Lewis put together a jazzy clarinet, a time-ravaged high hat and sentimental song-talk and strutted on the big time.

Not, as any of his rivals would be quick to point out, that Lewis played or sang particularly well. And Lewis agreed with them: "Sometimes I lie awake nights and wonder how I do it. I get by with murder."

Dubbed somewhere along his tail of music "the high hatted tragedian of song," Lewis was born in Circleville, the stage-struck son of Benjamin Friedman, proprietor of a ladies' ready-to-wear store, and Pauline Frank Friedman. He was christened Theodore Leopold Friedman.

He acquired the name Ted Lewis as a result of one of his vaudeville jaunts with a clown named Jack Lewis.

They were billed as Lewis and Friedman in a southern town. The marquee there was not large enough to hold the full name, so the manager cut it to Lewis and Lewis. And Theodore L. Friedman has been Ted Lewis ever since.

Lewis mortified his parents once by leading a bloodhound in an Uncle Tom's Cabin parade down Court street. It was one of his first appearances before the public.

Circleville's musical man of fame started on the road to success by playing a clarinet in E. L. Peters' nickelodeon. He also passed bills, sold peanuts and ushered.

HE WAS FIRED from Professor Oscar Ameringer's boys band in Circleville for pepping up the "Poet and Peasant Overture." He was nine years old at the time.

Years later, when Lewis was playing in Portland, Ore., Prof. Ameringer paid him a visit, said he had always been sorry for having fired him. The professor was then running for governor.

Lewis got his break a few years before World War I when

Belgians Vote For Return Of King, Kick Out Reds

BRUSSELS, June 5—Supporters of King Leopold III won control of Belgium's chamber of deputies today by a one seat margin in nationwide elections and confidently predicted the return of the "exiled" monarch "by July 1."

Minister of the Interior Albert De Vleeschauwer made the forecast as his Social Christian (Catholic) Party gained the thinnest of margins in the pivotal chamber in one of the closest elections in the nation's history.

The Social Christians also appeared to be on their way to victory in the senate, or upper chamber, where they took 54 seats, the Socialists 37, the Liberals 12 and the Communists three.

Forty-six senators will be chosen by provincial councils and 23 will be designated by the vote of the senators themselves.

The switching of only one ballot in the chamber of deputies can alter the balance of power on any vote to recall Leopold since the Social Christians won 107 seats to the combined opposition total of 105.

De Vleeschauwer, commenting on the outcome, said: "The Catholics have an absolute majority. The king will be back by July 1."

"We now have proof that the Social Christians can govern with an overall majority. The cabinet will meet Tuesday morning and the (caretaker) government then will resign."

Paul Strye, former justice minister, emphasized the decline in Communist strength, saying:

"Belgium is the first country in Continental Europe to kick out the Communists."

Some cold water was thrown on the Social Christian jubilation by the popular vote which gave the combined opposition an edge over the Catholic group, sole supporter of Leopold's immediate return.

The popular vote was: Social Christians—2,354,964 Socialists—1,805,007 Liberals—557,069 Communists—234,325

The addition of 870,181 votes from the Luxembourg and Limburg districts, where the Socialists and Liberals ran a coalition ticket, gave the opposition a total popular vote of 3,466,582.

Brannan Farm Plan Seen As Pivotal Point In Iowa's Primary Election

DES MOINES, June 5—Iowa voters go to the polls in primary elections today to give a "grass roots" opinion on the controversial Brannan Farm Plan.

The issue was injected into the Democratic primary by Albert J. Loveland, Janesville farmer and former undersecretary of agriculture who is seeking the senatorial nomination against five opponents.

In the Republican senatorial race, Sen. B. B. Hickenlooper is expected to encounter little opposition in a three-man field largely involving the issue over the incumbent's activities as a leader in Senate investigations.

The campaign was unusually quiet, but state chairman of both parties predicted a total vote of nearly a half million. Several hot local contests are expected to swell the vote.

The Democratic senatorial race is expected to be decided finally by the party's state convention in July since it is unlikely that any of the six candidates can poll the necessary 35 percent of the vote to win the nomination.

LOVELAND, who has been termed the "administration's candidate" by both Democrats and Republicans in the campaign, has come out in favor of the Brannan plan.

Nels G. Kraschel, former Iowa governor, is a vigorous opponent of the Brannan Plan. A third candidate in the senatorial race is Former Congressman Otha Wearin, an unsuccessful "purge" candidate supported by the late President Roosevelt against Sen. Guy Gillette, (D) Iowa, in 1938.

Other candidates in the race are Alvin P. Meyer, Ernest Seemann and W. M. Shaw.

Loveland has the support of the CIO and the Railway Citizens League, but is opposed by the Iowa Farm Bureau which, along with the American Farm Bureau Federation and its Iowa-born president, Allan

Kline of Vinton, has criticized severely the Brannan Plan.

The AFL is supporting Wearin who declared in his campaign that the party's convention should decide what kind of farm program the Iowa Democrats support.

In the Republican senatorial race, Hickenlooper is seeking nomination for a second term against Earl H. Wisdom, Des Moines attorney, and Harry B. Thompson of Muscatine. Hickenlooper was a leader in Congress in the Atomic Energy Commission investigation. He presently is engaged in an investigation of the State Department.

ONLY ONE of the eight incumbent Republicans in the congressional contests is expected to have strong opposition. He is Carl M. Lecompte of Corydon who is opposed for re-nomination by Leo A. Hoegh of Chariton.

Gov. William S. Beardsley, a Republican, is unopposed for re-nomination in the gubernatorial race.

In the Democratic gubernatorial race, Lester S. Gillette of Fostoria (no relative of Sen. Guy Gillette) is favored to win over Myron J. Bennett, former Republican.

ADMIRAL JUDGES NAMED

Bipartisan Probe Panel Being Urged On Truman

WASHINGTON, June 5—President Truman is being urged today to name a three-man bipartisan commission composed of Admiral Chester W. Nimitz and two outstanding judges to pass on the Communism in government charges.

An administration source reported that the names of Nimitz and Judges John Patrick Higgins and John J. Parker were among half a dozen submitted to the President for consideration. The list, it was said, includes Former Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts and several other federal judges.

A Democratic informant emphasized that there has been "no decision" on whether to proceed with the plan.

The proposal first was made several weeks ago by Chairman Tydings, (D) Md., of the Senate Loyalty Committee investigating the Communism charges of Sen. McCarthy, (R) Wis. Success of the shift, it was contended, would depend largely on the composition of the commission.

The development came as the Tydings committee prepared to hear one of the Amerasia case defendants in closed session this afternoon. The committee called Emanuel Larsen, who paid a $500 fine on a plea of no defense in the 1945 stolen document case, for interrogation on his part in the matter.

Although Mr. Truman was pictured as sympathetic to the commission approach, some of his close advisers were said to be opposed.

Radio Commentator Drew Pearson asserted in a copyright ABC network broadcast last night that Mr. Truman has designated three men to serve on the commission.

All three men said this morning that they had heard nothing about the commission or of their appointment to it.

The Senate investigation of Communism in government, meanwhile, was marked by these developments:

1. Sen. McCarthy, whose charges set off the present Red probe, announced that he will take the Senate floor Tuesday to read some "significant" State Department documents which

Lancaster Opens Big Celebration

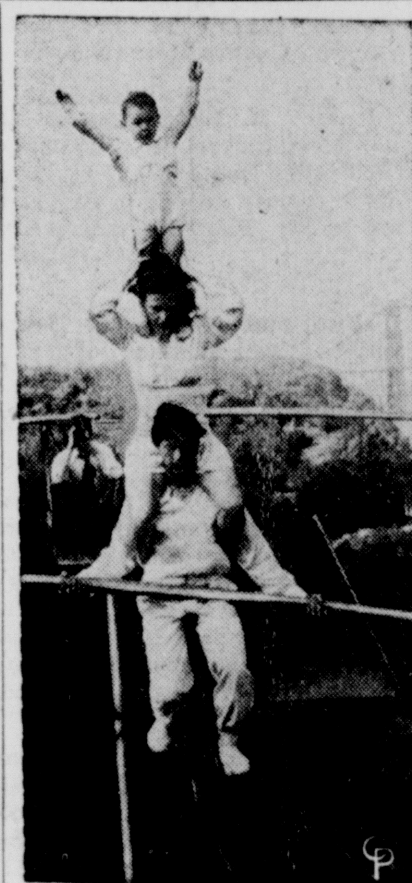

LANCASTER, June 5—Lancaster becomes 150 years old today with the lighting of the candles on a huge birthday cake.

The week-long sesquicentennial celebration of Lancaster and Fairfield County started yesterday. "Kiddies Day" starts today.

Miss Marilyn Neff will reign as queen of the festivities and the pageant, "The Epic of Standing Stone," will follow her coronation today.

Tuesday will be Homecoming Day. The women of the "Etta Kett Council" will take over Thursday. The queen's costume ball is slated for Friday night and Governor's Day will be featured Saturday with a sesquicentennial parade.

Lumia was said to be one of the leaders of a Tampa gambling syndicate that has an estimated $5 million annual take.

Self-Educated Engineer To Display New Ram Jet

FRESNO, Cal., June 5—Tom Homan, an obscure self-educated scientist who has been called everything from crackpot to air age prophet, said today he is ready to demonstrate to military authorities that he has the answer to superspeeds in the air.

The 37-year-old engineer for the newly formed Universal Jet Industries, Inc., in Fresno will take the wraps off a ram jet engine he has invented and which he hopes can take a plane ten miles high or non-stop around the world at presently unheard of speeds.

Homan will run his firing test at Fresno Air Terminal tomorrow morning. The inventor, who made his first flight at seven years of age, said of the demonstration:

"I realize of course that the Airforce may have something far superior to this and if so I have just been batting my head against a stone wall."

"But I know this engine, on the fuels we now have, can drive a plane 1,800 miles an hour."

Airforce officials said they know little about the project on which Homan has been working since 1946. But they are believed deeply interested in its possibilities and another firing test has been tentatively scheduled for a week from today if tomorrow's demonstration is successful.

MOST OF THE Navy and Airforce representatives, who will be present, plan to land at the field only 30 minutes before firing time, witness the event and then take off immediately. A close guard has been arranged around the test area.

The engine itself, known as the RR4, looks somewhat like an old muzzle-loading four-pounder.

The inventor, who has been told he is a "nut so many times I don't even care any more," is convinced the RR4 will develop more thrust than any ram jet engine on which figures have been released.

He is using a new alloy in key parts of the engine, a material he describes as "harder than diamonds."

Homan claims the developers of the alloy believe they have discovered a material that could revolutionize the entire field of metallurgy. He insists his work with the alloy bears out what appear to be the fantastic claims of its developers.

The inventor-engineer said the RR4 eats a secret combination of fuels, including some gasoline the consumption of which is small compared with the tremendous power it will develop.

Homan turned the design over to a group of Fresno backers who have sunk thousands of dollars into the project.

Timmons Quotes 'Law' To Officials

Humane Officer 'Not Eligible'

Pickaway County commissioners Monday slithered deeper into a doggy dither.

They learned unofficially that they "must appoint a dog warden, money or no money."

The advice was offered the county chiefs by Circleville Township Constable Harry Timmons, who said he had been into the matter thoroughly with County Prosecutor Guy Cline.

"And the law says," said Timmons, "that the county commissioners shall appoint a dog warden. It also says that the county humane officer shall work in conjunction with the dog warden."

Humane Officer Ralph Wallace, present in the commissioners' office at the time, listened closely to Timmons' speech, said he didn't believe Timmons had the matter straight.

Cline was not present at the meeting, could not be reached for comment.

THE CONSTABLE declared that he had looked into the matter carefully, and that "a letter has been sent to the attorney general's office to get a ruling on the matter."

"Who sent the letter?" asked Wallace.

"Follow named Harry Timmons," replied Timmons.

"Why?" Wallace wanted to know.

"Because I want the job," Timmons shot back. "I want to be dog warden."

He declared he would not be holding two county jobs, that his pay as constable came from township trustees, not from the county commissioners.

But, he continued, the commissioners could not appoint Wallace dog warden as long as he continued to hold the position as humane officer. Wallace, Timmons pointed out, draws $35 a month from the county.

The dog warden question arose last week after Warden Harry Riffle lost his position.

He had been hired by the commissioners on a month-to-month basis.

$3 Billion Aid Bill Is Signed By President

WASHINGTON, June 5—President Truman signed the $3,248,450,000 omnibus foreign aid bill today and called it a major step toward peace and "the defeat of Communist imperialists."

The chief executive emphasized the importance he attaches to continuation of the Marshall Plan and assistance to other non-Communist areas of the world by arranging a special White House ceremony in which to affix his signature to the document.

Cabinet members, congressional leaders and economic cooperation administration officials joined the President in his office as he signed the authorization measure.

The President hailed the Foreign Aid Act, which authorizes $2,977,000,000 for the third year of the Marshall Plan, as "a major contribution to peace and freedom in the world."

He particularly emphasized congressional approval of a $35 million fund for inaugurating the Point Four plan of technical aid to underdeveloped areas of the world. He said of Point Four:

"If we can, gradually but steadily, help to replace sickness with health, illiteracy with education, poverty with a higher standards of living, for the millions of peoples who live in underdeveloped areas, we shall make a tremendous contribution to the strength of freedom and the defeat of Communist imperialism."

Innocent Plea Filed

Reichelderfer Faces 3 Counts

Former Circleville Banker Nelson E. Reichelderfer pleaded innocent Monday to three counts of embezzlement and falsifying accounts.

Reichelderfer was arraigned before Federal Judge Mel G. Underwood Monday in Columbus. He waived a grand jury hearing and consented to be tried on a criminal information charge.

Bond was continued in the amount of $2,000. No trial date was set.

He is accused of embezzling and falsifying accounts to cover a shortage of about $7,000.

The former state bank examiner was executive vice-president of the Circleville Savings and Banking Co. until the latter part of May.

He was arrested by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and received a preliminary hearing before a U. S. commissioner in Chillicothe where the original bond was set and the 68-year-old man freed from the Ross County jail.

EXECUTIVE vice-president of the local bank for 16 years, he claimed after his arrest that the high cost of living forced him to dip into the bank's till.

He claimed that during his regime, he built up the bank from $300,000 to about $2 million, but that he never received more than $3,200 a year salary for his work.

He said: "I always could make money for the other fellow, but not for myself."

California Set For Tuesday's Primary Poll

SAN FRANCISCO, June 5—Candidates issued eleventh-hour appeals today for votes in tomorrow's California primary elections, featured by a heated contest between Republican Governor Earl Warren and Democrat James Roosevelt for the gubernatorial nominations of both major parties.

An estimated 2,600,000 voters are expected to go to the polls and decide party candidacies for the governorship, a U. S. Senate seat, 23 congressional posts and various other state and local offices.

Warren, the first governor in California's history to seek a third term, was generally conceded victory in the top primary. His supporters claimed he would at least make serious inroads

Belgians Vote For Return Of King, Kick Out Reds

BRUSSELS, June 5—Supporters of King Leopold III won control of Belgium's chamber of deputies today by a one seat margin in nationwide elections and confidently predicted the return of the "exiled" monarch "by July 1."

Minister of the Interior Albert De Vleeschauwer made the forecast as his Social Christian (Catholic) Party gained the thinnest of margins in the pivotal election in one of the closest elections in the nation's history.

The Social Christians also appeared to be on their way to victory in the senate, or upper chamber, where they took 54 seats, the Socialists 37, the Liberals 12 and the Communists three.

Forty-six senators will be chosen by provincial councils and 23 will be designated by the vote of the senators themselves.

The switching of only one ballot in the chamber of deputies can alter the balance of power on any vote to recall Leopold since the Social Christians won 107 seats to the combined opposition total of 105.

De Vleeschauwer, commenting on the outcome, said: "The Catholics have an absolute majority. The king will be back by July 1."

"We now have proof that the Social Christians can govern with an overall majority. The cabinet will meet Tuesday morning and the (caretaker) government then will resign."

Paul Strye, former justice minister, emphasized the decline in Communist strength, saying:

"Belgium is the first country in Continental Europe to kick out the Communists."

Some cold water was thrown on the Social Christian jubilation by the popular vote which gave the combined opposition an edge over the Catholic group, sole supporter of Leopold's immediate return.

The popular vote was: Social Christians—2,354,964 Socialists—1,805,007 Liberals—557,069 Communists—234,325

The addition of 870,181 votes from the Luxembourg and Limbourg districts, where the Socialists and Liberals ran a coalition ticket, gave the opposition a total popular vote of 3,466,582.

Timmons Quotes 'Law' To Officials

basis. They failed to put through a motion to rehire him for June.

Reason was "exhaustion of the dog kennel fund" from which Riffle's salary was paid, officials said.

A PUBLIC hearing has been scheduled for Friday in Pickaway Courthouse as part of an investigation into a state examiner's finding against Riffle.

The finding against Riffle was for $1,688, and was based on evidence that he hauled dead animal carcasses to a Columbus rendering plant and sold them for personal profit.

State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson reopened the investigation into the finding after Commissioner John Keller went to bat for Riffle.

With exhaustion of the kennel fund, hiring of a dog warden looked improbable to county commissioners because of lack of funds.

But, according to Constable Timmons:

"Money or no money, the law says the commissioners shall appoint a dog warden—if you don't have it, borrow it."

The commissioners indicated they would await the attorney general's answer to Timmons' letter.

"We are not going to bother looking into it ourselves," they said.

Meanwhile, Riffle will continue to look after dogs already in the county dog pound until the hearing Friday, the commissioners said. New dog cases apparently will be left up to Humane Officer Wallace.

The commissioners reported that digging commenced Monday in preparation for installation of a pressure pump for the new animal shelter on the Ringgold Southern Road one-third mile east of the County Home.

Tokyo Calling General Strike

TOKYO, June 5—Japan's Communist newspaper Akahata reported tonight that a Tokyo general strike is being planned for Wednesday or Thursday and the authorities moved promptly to forestall any new outbreaks.

While the government announced its intention of outlawing Communism, Tokyo's police commissioner, Sichi Tanaka, extended indefinitely and tightened a ban on public meetings throughout the capital.

The new prohibition applies to all parades and assemblies "designed to create social unrest," Tanaka said.

Lad, 9, Killed By Tombstone

DE PERE, Wis., June 5—A 500-pound tombstone toppled over on Arnold Alberts, 9, in Mt. Olive cemetery Sunday, and crushed the boy to death.

A similar accident occurred in a Lakeville, Mich., cemetery last week when a three-year-old boy was crushed by a 300-pound monument.

No General Price Hike In Steel Seen

CLEVELAND, June 5—Steel Magazine reported today that no general price increase by large steelmakers is expected in the immediate future, despite sharply increased production and raw material costs.

The national metalworking periodical said steel production is hanging close to an all-time high mark with the ingot rate holding at 101.5 percent of capacity. It continued:

"Capacity production and high earnings argue against general price increases at this time, though specific product increases to compensate for unusual costs are not crossed out. For example, an increase on stainless and nickel alloy steel as result of last week's increase of eight cents per pound on nickel would not be surprising."

One of the most important bulish factors influencing steel market developments currently is the sharp advance in scrap prices, the magazine noted. Current average of steel making scrap prices is about 35 percent over that prevailing last December when finished steel prices were generally raised.

According to the magazine, steelmakers are unable to keep pace with demand. Despite record-breaking output, order backlog continues to swell under consumer pressure reminiscent of the frantic buying in the scarcity market two years ago.

Ted Lewis Is Honored

he assembled a four piece band at Coney Island. That landed him a job as featured clarinetist in Earl Fuller's band, playing in Rectors restaurant in New York.

He stayed two years with his own band, playing his own kind of music. During this period he acquired the moth-eaten high hat.

It was in 1917. He put up 25 cents against an old high hat owned by a Negro cabbie named "Mississippi." They rolled dice in front of the restaurant. Lewis won, and never would part with the hat with the silver lining. It became his trademark.

Prior to the break, Lewis appeared in a series of small vaudeville acts booked by a Springfield impresario. His early appearances represented a series of sackings.

"I'd be fired about every other day," Lewis recalled. "So I'd wire in for a job under another name—Ted Burns, Ted Smith—always a Ted in it. I think Gus finally got on to me."

While "at liberty" as the theatre ads gently described it, Lewis demonstrated instruments in Henry Goldsmith's store in Columbus.

LEWIS PERFORMED with medicine shows, led his own dance band, organized his own traveling stage units and even did a turn in burlesque in 1915. In 1924 he produced his own show, the Ted Lewis Frolics, and in five weeks lost $130,000, his entire savings.

At times he was so busy he had three engagements the same day. He once jumped around New York, playing Keith's Palace, the Greenwich Village Follies and Ziegfield's Midnight Frolics the same night. He did it again for $10,000 a week in London. He once calculated he had played before seven presidents and a king of England.

Lewis has traveled in every state in the Union, made four trips abroad. He introduced American jazz in London. He made "When My Baby Smiles At Me," "Goodnight," and "Me and My Shadow" famous.

He has never had a publicity agent. He explains:

"I work all the year around with top pay. Give a guy too much publicity and he dies quickly."

"Being a musician doesn't count. It's the customers I must

On Oct. 7, 1915, he married Ada Becker of New York, a toe dancer in the revue in which Lewis and two others did a musical act. She became Lewis' business manager. They have no children.

In Circleville Lewis has contributed much to make the town a better place. He has done much to make his famous slogan come true:

Mayor Miller Nursing Ouchy Toe Sheepishly

Circleville's Mayor Thurman Miller Monday was hobbling around City Hall nursing an ouchy big toe and a sheepish disposition.

Settling himself slowly behind his desk and resting his cane on the desktop, the mayor sheepishly admitted that the Sabbath had given him troubles.

"I was carrying a sheet of masonite around the house yesterday," said the mayor after evaluating his foot to a comfortable level, "when the doggone thing slipped out of my hand."

"It fell straight down, landing edgewise on my left big toe. Did it hurt? I'll say it did."

The mayor wisely chose to remain silent as to whether he unleashed a few choice remarks following the Sabbath injury.

Miller said he had the toe x-rayed later, and the toe was found to be cracked.

"The doctor said it may take two months to heal," mourned h basis. They failed to put through a motion to rehire him for June.

Reason was "exhaustion of the dog kennel fund" from which Riffle's salary was paid, officials said.

A PUBLIC hearing has been scheduled for Friday in Pickaway Courthouse as part of an investigation into a state examiner's finding against Riffle.

The finding against Riffle was for $1,688, and was based on evidence that he had dead animal carcasses to a Columbus rendering plant and sold them for personal profit.

State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson reopened the investigation into the finding after Commissioner John Keller went to bat for Riffle.

With exhaustion of the kennel fund, hiring of a dog warden looked improbable to county commissioners because of lack of funds.

But, according to Constable Timmons:

"Money or no money, the law says the commissioners shall appoint a dog warden—if you don't have it, borrow it."

The commissioners indicated they would await the attorney general's answer to Timmons' letter.

"We are not going to bother looking into it ourselves," they said.

Meanwhile, Riffle will continue to look after dogs already in the county dog pound until the hearing Friday, the commissioners said. New dog cases apparently will be left up to Humane Officer Wallace.

The commissioners reported that digging commenced Monday in preparation for installation of a pressure pump for the new animal shelter on the Ringgold Southern Road one-third mile east of the County Home.

No General Price Hike In Steel Seen

CLEVELAND, June 5—Steel Magazine reported today that no general price increase by large steelmakers is expected in the immediate future, despite sharply increased production and raw material costs.

The national metalworking periodical said steel production is hanging close to an all-time high mark with the ingot rate holding at 101.5 percent of capacity. It continued:

"Capacity production and high earnings argue against general price increases at this time, though specific product increases to compensate for unusual costs are not crossed out. For example, an increase on stainless and nickel alloy steel as result of last week's increase of eight cents per pound on nickel would not be surprising."

One of the most important bulish factors influencing steel market developments currently is the sharp advance in scrap prices, the magazine noted. Current average of steel making scrap prices is about 35 percent over that prevailing last December when finished steel prices were generally raised.

According to the magazine, steelmakers are unable to keep pace with demand. Despite record-breaking output, order backlog continues to swell under consumer pressure reminiscent of the frantic buying in the scarcity market two years ago.

Newfoundland Battles Fires

ST. JOHN'S, June 5—Two major forest fires raged in South-eastern Newfoundland today but 10 others that broke out within the last week have been quenched or are under control.

The gravest blaze menaced the large settlement and railway junction at Clarenville in the Notre Dame Bay area.

A change of wind and a few scattered showers are believed to have ended the menace to Clarenville's two million gallons of gasoline storage and a planned evacuation of residents has been cancelled.

Ted Lewis Is Honored

he assembled a four piece band at Coney Island. That landed him a job as featured clarinetist in Earl Fuller's band, playing in Rectors restaurant in New York.

He stayed two years with his own band, playing his own kind of music. During this period he acquired the moth-eaten high hat.

It was in 1917. He put up 25 cents against an old high hat owned by a Negro cabbie named "Mississippi." They rolled dice in front of the restaurant. Lewis won, and never would part with the hat with the silver lining. It became his trademark.

Prior to the break, Lewis appeared in a series of small vaudeville acts booked by a Springfield impresario. His early appearances represented a series of sackings.

"I'd be fired about every other day," Lewis recalled. "So I'd wire in for a job under another name—Ted Burns, Ted Smith—always a Ted in it. I think Gus finally got on to me."

While "at liberty" as the theatre ads gently described it, Lewis demonstrated instruments in Henry Goldsmith's store in Columbus.

LEWIS PERFORMED with medicine shows, led his own dance band, organized his own traveling stage units and even did a turn in burlesque in 1915. In 1924 he produced his own show, the Ted Lewis Frolics, and in five weeks lost $130,000, his entire savings.

At times he was so busy he had three engagements the same day. He once jumped around New York, playing Keith's Palace, the Greenwich Village Folies and Ziegfeld's Midnight Frolics the same night. He did it again for $10,000 a week in London. He once calculated he had played before seven presidents and a king of England.

Lewis has traveled in every state in the Union, made four trips abroad. He introduced American jazz in London. He made "When My Baby Smiles At Me," "Goodnight," and "Me and My Shadow" famous.

He has never had a publicity agent. He explains:

"I work all the year around with top pay. Give a guy too much publicity and he dies quickly."

Dear Mr. President:

I see by the papers that the Freedom Fair which was scheduled to open in Washington in 1951 has been called off. I respectfully suggest that you press a few buttons and call it back on again, and with your patience and permission I'd like to tell you why.

As this lopsided eight-ball of a planet currently shapes up, about the only thing worth talking about is freedom, or the lack of it, and as you yourself have repeatedly pointed out in your speeches, our people ought to know what they're talking about when the subject comes up.

Well, what's the best way to demonstrate that there's still plenty of life in the old liberties? Fastidious facts and figures? Cliche-studded press releases? Rah - rah - rah editorials?

No, Mr. President, not in this day and age. As I see it, the best way to stand off the sugar-coated strychnine being handed out by the kids in the Kremlin is to hand out a few lollypops of our own, and I can't think of a better place to do it than a 200-acre fairground within eyeshot of the Lincoln Memorial.

Impact-wise, what would such a shindig actually accomplish? Not much, Sir, if it were just a run-of-the - Flushing - meadows type of fair. But it would do a potent plenty if it were a mammoth, hit-'em-in-all - five - senses whootydo in which everything from spectacle to sideshow were built around one simple theme: The Freer the Enterprise, the

Elinor Williams' Teen Tips

"Money In Your Pocket" is the intriguing title of a new booklet by the Institute of Life Insurance, telling how to make the most of your allowance—so you'll have enough folding stuff for the things you want.

Thrifty, it says, is good management of money—not penny-pinching or nickel-nursing. You can spend your money and have fun as you go along and yet have something for future needs, it points out.

How? By dividing your allowance or money that you earn into two classifications:—"Have to" and "Want to" spending. Like this:

1. Out of your allowance and earnings, there are certain "have to's"—things that you have to spend money for and can't duck and don't want to avoid. They usually include Scout dues, maybe school lunches, bus fares, possibly your share of team expenses or club dues, contributions to school or church activities. Pay these first. Then they're taken care of and off your mind.

2. Money left from the "have to's" can be spent on "want to's." But the way to get the most out of the money you can spend freely is to ask yourself, "What do I want to do most with my money? Will what I think I want now be something that I'll want and be glad I have a month or a year from now? Or something I'll remember later as worth the money I spent on it?" If you really give it a little thought and are honest in answering yourself, you'll manage your money sensibly, spend it on worthwhile things you really want.

3. Once you get your real "want to" spending figured out, pay for it in regular installments—and make those installments "have to's." Save a dime, a quarter, a dollar a week, depending on what you've got to work with. Stick to the schedule and don't let any temporary "want to" spending upset it.

For example, in the exhibit area let our big auto outfits trot out their cars alongside a few Russian cars, and then let them dramatize how many man-hours of work it takes to make one—and, even more important, own one.

ALONGSIDE the big General Motors building, let's have an even bigger U.A.W. building in which Walter Reuther can dramatically document how much better off his men are in terms of union contracts, working conditions and pension plans than the auto workers in the various Commielands.

Once and for all, let's pull out all the stops and compare our homes, schools and churches with theirs. Let's exhibit an American voting booth with a curtain on the door, and next to it a Russian voting booth with an N.K.V.D. man where the curtain ought to be. In short, let's give the Pinkos the lumps they've been asking for and make it clear as the nose on Jimmy Durante's face that there's no freedom unless everybody can exercise his taste and tonsils as he sees fit.

Let's even show them up on the midway. Instead of the usual Chamber of Horrors, let's re-stage the trial of Cardinal Mindszenty, and instead of the old-hat Ubangi sideshow, let the populace take a peek at a Siberian slave labor camp.

With no pomp but plenty of documented circumstance, one big lesson is a cinch to emerge from the fair I envision: That "degenerate democracy" still provides the bestest for the mostest; that our way of life has got what it takes, and it would be downright silly to let the Commies take what we've got.

Of course, Mr. President, there isn't a chance of getting such a fair on by next year, but if the right words were dropped into the right ears pronto, there's no reason why the grand opening couldn't be set for '52. And, according to my astrologist, that would be an auspicious year for a fair, seeing as how around that time a certain Party will be doing its darnedest to convince the voters that it has a special talent for making democracy work.

If you think well enough of this notion to get behind it, Sir, I'll be glad to pitch in and help—whether it's making policy or pink lemonade. Of course, I wouldn't do it for free. My fee would have to be the same as I'm getting as Advisory Director to the California World Progress Exposition which will be held in San Diego in '53—a one - pound can of good smoking tobacco.

Respectfully,

FANATICISM IN GERMANY

THE EXTENT to which fanaticism is being revived in the Russian zone of Germany was revealed in the Communist youth rally in Berlin. Observers said it was the old Hitler youth organization come back to life, with its blind iron discipline and its flowering urge to conquer something. Hitler told his youth they would conquer the world. What goal is before the new Communist youth of Germany?

The discipline of this band cannot be mistaken when it marches in proud and blatant display of the Russian flag, cheers for Russian leaders, and stages a spectacular ceremony on the steps of the Russian war monument. For only five years ago Germany and Russia were at war, and since the war Russia has stripped and exploited and terrorized its zone of Germany. And these were German youths, the always intensely loyal and proud German youths, who paraded in honor of their own conquerors. Their purpose is not to be lightly regarded.

Their first purpose doubtless is the reunion of Germany. As long as Germany remains partitioned this growing organization of East German youth will be an explosive force which must be reckoned with. On this score the Russians, too, must carefully guard the monster they are creating. The nature of the fanaticism exploited by Hitler is such that nothing matters except the purpose; that kind of fanaticism is dangerous for the master as well as for the intended victims.

THE RIGHT TO SLANDER

DO YOU have an enemy? You can ruin his reputation by charging him with any form of wrongful action from theft to treason. You do not have to bring forward any evidence, and you can get the widest possible publicity for your charges.

How can you do this? By being elected to Congress, and thereby getting immunity for any slanders you may choose to utter. Only a few congressmen and senators are so unscrupulous as to take advantage of this opportunity, but those few will utterly discredit the legislative branch of the government unless they are restrained.

This is the opinion not of an outsider, but of a veteran senator, Scott W. Lucas of Illinois, writing in the New York Times Magazine. He has witnessed some deplorable exhibitions of loose talk, just as he has seen some serious congressional investigations which have been very helpful to the nation.

Congress is naturally loath to curb its members, just as many parents dislike to discipline their children. But children cannot be allowed to run riot, and neither should congressmen.

It's no fun to face trouble, but sometimes it's better than turning your back on it.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

The Genocide Convention is up for Senate confirmation and should that happen, its provisions will become the law of the land. This convention is a product of the horror of man's inhumanity to man as evidenced by Hitler.

The New Orleans States, in a series of articles on this subject, says:

"No decent person can quarrel with the announced objectives of this treaty—the outlawing of mass murder of groups of people. The very words Buchenwald, Dachau and Lidice will live forever as a measure of mankind's degradation."

While recognizing that the conscience of civilization cannot tolerate the destruction of the innocent, this particular Genocide Convention should be considered very carefully before it is ratified by the Senate, because it seems to load down the United States with responsibilities while providing for no protections against outside interference in the internal affairs of the United States. A treaty is, under our Constitution, a binding law.

Genocide means that a nation or a ruler acts to exterminate an entire people, or a segment of a people, as Hitler did to the Jews and as Stalin has been doing to the intellectual classes of all the satellite countries. Should the Genocide Convention become binding upon the United States, it would mean that this country would have to go to war against such a nation committing the crime by vote of a majority in the United Nations. As only two countries in the world today possess the military prowess to fight out a major issue, the United States or Soviet Russia, one or the other, would have to undertake whatever shooting was involved.

Article VIII is particularly pertinent: "Any contracting party may call upon the competent organs of the United Nations to take such action under the charter of the United Nations as they consider appropriate for the prevention and suppression of acts of genocide or any of the other acts enumerated in Article III."

If a majority of the United Nations ordered the United States to act under this clause, this country would be bound to go to war, with or without the consent of Congress or the American people. The United States would have the contractual obligation to obey the United Nations. The State Department admitted this when it said in its letter of transmittal:

"It leaves to states themselves the basic obligation to protect entire human groups in their right to live. On the other hand, it is designed to insure international liability where state responsibility has not been properly discharged."

Furthermore, the State Department takes a narrow view of genocide. It is willing to accept the killing of one person as genocide. In the letter of transmittal appears this amazing paragraph:

"If an individual is murdered by another individual, or by a group, whether composed of private citizens or government officials, as part of a plan or with the intent to destroy one of the groups enumerated in Article II, the international legal crime of genocide is committed as well as the municipal-law crime of homicide."

X-Ray for Tumor of the Brain

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

CONTRARY to the general opinion, tumors of the brain can, and not infrequently do, develop in children. Even babies may have them, but most brain tumors seem to develop during the sixth year of life. Unfortunately, in the young child, a tumor may be present for some time before it discloses itself. Even with adults it cannot cause symptoms until it becomes large enough to block the flow of blood through the brain or to increase pressure within the skull cavity. This situation is postponed in the baby or young child because the bones of the skull can separate so easily along the sutures or lines where they are joined together. Thus, in the beginning, a tumor is likely to cause only an enlargement of the head.

Different Symptoms
Even when they appear, symptoms are different from those in the adult and far less definite. Perhaps the first symptom to appear is vomiting.

There may also be some sickness at the stomach or nausea. Symptoms may often be brought on by a cold or some other illness. The vomiting may stop for a time and then start again. Headache, also, develops in some cases. The headache usually occurs in the morning and frequently is accompanied by vomiting. The headache is made worse by stooping, coughing, or straining.

The third most common symptom is a staggering gait. It may begin gradually, and is often attributed to the weakness caused by the vomiting.

Convulsions appear in most cases. They may start with jerking of the face, arm, or leg. Double vision is a symptom which may appear as the tumor increases in size.

X-Ray of Skull

In all cases where a brain tumor is suspected, X-rays of the skull should be made. What is known as an electroencephalogram, or tracings of the brain waves, is helpful to show tumors of the front part of the brain and to tell the brain tumor from epilepsy.

What is known as a pneumoencephalogram is also useful. This procedure is carried out by injecting air into the brain cavity and then making X-ray plates. In practically all instances, it is possible, by careful study, to diagnose a brain tumor. Operation for its removal should be carried out without delay.

"I didn't say that," answered the doctor. "But that will give you pneumonia, and pneumonia I know how to cure."

The Outsiders

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

ABOUT half past five of that same afternoon, his business in Cranford finished, George Culbert went into the Grill and Bar of the Colonial Inn and sat down in a booth in a corner. He always chose this booth because of the girl who waited on it, Sadie Rosinski. She was broad-faced and blunt-nosed, but her flesh had a clean pink firmness, and George Culbert ran his fingers along her forearm as he gave his order. "Rye and soda. Make it double, honey. I'm on top of the world today."

He felt, in truth, that he was. Everything was breaking right. He had not written to the Bendley Mills, he had phoned to them long distance. Direct talk would speed the matter up and it was more private to telephone from Cranford than in his office, where one of the mill men might come, any minute. He'd had the luck to get through to Morris Bendley, the big shot of the Bendley Mills. Morris Bendley had set a day, ten days off, for a conference and had agreed to drive up to New Interval.

Bendley had intimated that he wanted the sale, if sale there was, closed with as little delay as possible. The red tape involved in clearing the people out of the valley would hold back the construction of the new dam and it was important to get at that as quickly as possible. Culbert, on his part, had admitted a willingness to hurry things.

Eliza had agreed with him this morning that it wasn't sense to throw good money after bad. Scarcely her along that line and she'd be ready enough to sign the valley away.

The breakdown of the beater had played into his hands, just as he had planned it should. Even with it patched up, as it would have to be, to forestall another accident, manufacturing would be slowed down. Miss Eliza Forrestal would see what that did to the profits! She could read her figures, at least. His figures!

He felt pretty certain that she did not know how much she had— if she did she would not swallow so easily the hard-up talk he dished out to her. Well, it wasn't up to him to enlighten her!

He ordered a steak and french-fried potatoes and a drink to top off his celebration.

He drove back to New Interval, very much satisfied with life in general and George Culbert in particular.

As he reached the Beebe house and slowed to turn in the drive, Marilyn Streeter's small figure darted out from the dark shadow of a tree, one hand lifted to signal him to stop. He stopped and she jerked the door open and jumped into the car.

She cried breathlessly, "I've been waiting forever, for you to come!"

She wore her red sweater and a red flower in her hair.

"What's the idea?" But he grinned down into her face and he was already turning the car back into the road.

"I haven't seen you for such ages—I mean to be alone with you! John's gone over the hill—that old woman's dying, really dying, I guess, this time. The kid came for John. And I thought it was a chance—I saw you drive up the valley this afternoon and I've been watching for you to come back. Take me somewhere, George!" Nervousness threaded her voice; her hand slipped under his arm.

"Thanks, a—a lot."

ONE MAN'S OPINION

The fellow New York hired to make rain doesn't know his own strength.

It's the first year New York ever invited conventions to town and clung to it. "Where?" The quality of George Culbert's smile changed a little. A mile or so down the road was an abandoned farmhouse and barn, George Culbert remembered. Not so far away but that they could be back before John Streeter got home.

"Last night—my party, I mean, it was awful, wasn't it, George?" "I thought everything went off all right."

"Oh, it was horribly dull! That Jeremy Penny—I never met such a stick. And I don't think Eliza Forrestal's much better. George, you don't like her more than you do me, do you? Bringing her last night, and taking her home..."

"I have to keep a stand-in with her," put in George, in a conciliatory tone. "Jealous, were you, baby?"

"I could have torn out Eliza Forrestal's eyes! Yours, too. And it was really just that? Keeping a stand-in with her? I don't know why I didn't think of it, after the things you've said to me about liking me. More than any girl you ever met—all that."

"Did I ever say that?" "You know you did! You're teasing me!" She drew a sharp, desperate breath. "Oh, I wish we could drive and drive and never go back to New Interval!"

The low bulk of the farmhouse suddenly loomed up at his left. He swung the car to the side of the road, stopped the motor.

Marilyn sat up straight. "Why are we stopping? I meant..." "To kiss you," said George Culbert.

He laughed, and with a little cry she slid out of the car. He saw her fall on the steep incline going down the road, but she got up again and ran on and then darkness swallowed her.

Sobs choked her breathing and her ankle hurt painfully where it had been wrenched when she fell, but Marilyn ran on through the darkness. To get away was her only thought. To get home...

Oh, she hated him, hated him. Then she heard what she had feared—the rattle of a car behind her. Terrified, she stumbled down into the ditch at the side of the road, threw herself flat, face down in it, her arms up over her head.

But the headlights picked her up. The car came to a stop, and the next moment a man's voice said over her, "What's the matter?"

Marilyn struggled to her feet. "I—I hurt my ankle!"

"That's all! Thought you'd been hit by a car. That you were dead, way you lay. Say, you're the doctor's wife?"

He was a young man, big of build. He was wearing the denim mill men wore and an old windbreaker. He was scowling as he regarded Marilyn. "I'll give you a lift back, if your ankle's hurt."

"Oh, if you will, please," Sobs still shook Marilyn's voice.

He put out a hand and helped her out of the ditch and into the car. He was still scowling darkly but Marilyn was too grateful to sink back into the seat of the car to care what he might be thinking of her.

He did not speak as they drove to New Interval. Nor did Marilyn, drawn into her corner, sick from the pain of her ankle, more sick with burning hatred.

They reached the valley, the house. The young man stopped the car.

"Thanks, a—a lot."

"No trouble. You'd better have the doc strap up that ankle right off."

"I will," said Marilyn and got out and limped up to the house. A light was burning in the kitchen. John was home...

"What in the world has happened, Lyn?" he asked, his eyes going over her.

"She looked down at herself, saw the dirt from the ditch on her sweatshirt and skirt, felt it on her face, in her hair. She felt it deep in her, out of John's sight. The pain from her swelling ankle beat in her in sickening waves."

"I—I went for a walk. I fell down—someone brought me home..." She swayed a little, groped for a chair. "My—my ankle..." John's arms caught her as she fainted.

A group of men stood in the mill yard the next morning. They talked about the manager. About his knowing that the blades in the beater were cracked and doing nothing about it. About his laying Dave Wilson's accident to his own carelessness!

They dragged out older grievances. Every now and then someone cursed the manager; and others, as expressively, spat hard to the ground, when his name was spoken.

Then Loren Matthews joined them. He was Tom Matthews' grandson. He had Tom's commanding bulk; his hair was thick and dark now but some day it would be white and bushy and his eyes, like his grandfather's, would be white and bushy and his eyes, like his grandfather's, would blaze out from under jutting, shaggy brows. They had a grim look in them, now.

He heard one of the men speak the manager's name as he came up and repeated it, adding, "Dirty dog! Listen to what I know of him!"

They drew in a closer circle around him and he told them of passing the manager's car, the evening before, pulled off the road. "At the old Quinby house, two miles down. Wasn't no one in the car. My lights showed that." And then, along a piece, there in the ditch was the doc's wife. Thrown on her face. First I thought she'd been hit and thrown there but when I spoke she lifted her head. She was scared sick. Couldn't close her mouth, way a kitten can't after a dog's chased her. She was running away from him all right.

Until this moment every man in the group had looked upon Marilyn and her prettiness with complete indifference. An outsider! But, now, such was their anger, there were no lines drawn. Throat's growled, hands doubled into fists. "Run him out of the valley!"

"Run him and run him out on a rail!"

Hate went around their circle like a flame.

"Beat him up! Beat him to a pulp!"

"That's the doc's right."

"Him? He couldn't throw a punch!" But there was no scorn in the man's voice and at once someone growled, "I'll help him!"

"If he needs us..."

Tom Matthews came out to them. He held a slip of paper in his hand. He jerked his massive head backward in the direction of the manager's office. "Order is for you fellows to go home and stay until you're sent for." He tore the paper across, crushed the pieces in his big, gnarled hand.

Labor Leaders Ignore Lewis | University of Missouri Has In Latest Move for Unity | Five-Year Wait for Truman

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—The American Federation of Labor by a subtle piece of maneuvering has left John L. Lewis out of the movement for labor unity. What happened is this:

Several weeks ago CIO President Philip Murray proposed that the CIO, AFL, the railroad unions, Lewis and other independents set up a committee to talk about merging labor unions into one national organization. Lewis quickly accepted the invitation to participate.

The AFL waited some time, however, and then accepted after proposing a modification of the CIO plan. Its idea is that committees representing the AFL and CIO should sit down and discuss the matter. Nothing was said about Lewis taking part.

The expectation is that Lewis will have his say about the snub when he thinks the time propitious. But the AFL leaders make no secret of the fact that they want no part of him.

● TRUMAN RELENTS—President Truman will settle a personal matter of some delicacy June 9 when he delivers the commencement address at the University of Missouri and accepts from the university an honorary L.L.D. degree.

Since he became President, Mr. Truman has been "too busy" to accept a degree from his home state university, although he found time to accept various other honorary degrees, including one from small William Jewell college at Liberty, Mo.

Persons close to the situation say the reason the President has been "too busy" is that the University of Missouri studiously passed him over when he was in the Senate. It took occasion, meanwhile, to give an honorary degree to Bennett Champ Clark, at the time his Senate colleague.

After Mr. Truman became President, the university sought to make amends, according to the story. But the President waited five years to respond.

● GIs GET AN AIR FORCE—Recent events prove that the Air Force is doing everything it can within its budget to provide ground force support, a phase of the defense effort which Army generals declare was being neglected. Latest proof was the announcement of the Republic F-96-A fighter.

When the Air Force unveiled the plane it said it would serve two purposes, long range escort and low level bombing. The F-96-A is the fourth such type to be given the additional task of low level work, obviously to support ground forces.

The new plane, like the others, will have a speed of 700 miles an hour or better and will carry "external armament." That means rockets, probably the "mighty mouse," a 2.75 inch job that, fired from a speeding plane, will have the punch of a 75-millimeter cannon.

● MOSCOW NOTES—Reports trickling into the State department indicate that Moscow is not exactly a paradise for the motorist, especially if he is looking for gas.

Although the city is believed to have a population of seven million, it has only 49 filling stations with 120 pumps, according to the reports.

Complaints are being made by some of the more reckless Russian citizens that only half of these pumps

The New Orleans States, in a series of articles on this subject, says:

"No decent person can quarrel with the announced objectives of this treaty—the outlawing of mass murder of groups of people. The very words Buchenwald, Dachau and Lidice will live forever as a measure of mankind's degradation."

While recognizing that the conscience of civilization cannot tolerate the destruction of the innocent, this particular Genocide Convention should be considered very carefully before it is ratified by the Senate, because it seems to load down the United States with responsibilities while providing for no protections against outside interference in the internal affairs of the United States. A treaty is, under our Constitution, a binding law.

Genocide means that a nation or a ruler acts to exterminate an entire people, or a segment of a people, as Hitler did to the Jews and as Stalin has been doing to the intellectual classes of all the satellite countries. Should the Genocide Convention become binding upon the United States, it would mean that this country would have to go to war against such a nation committing the crime by vote of a majority in the United Nations. As only two countries in the world today possess the military prowess to fight out a major issue, the United States or Soviet Russia, one or the other, would have to undertake whatever shooting was involved.

Article VIII is particularly pertinent: "Any contracting party may call upon the competent organs of the United Nations to take such action under the charter of the United Nations as they consider appropriate for the prevention and suppression of acts of genocide or any of the other acts enumerated in Article III."

If a majority of the United Nations ordered the United States to act under this clause, this country would be bound to go to war, with or without the consent of Congress or the American people. The United States would have the contractual obligation to obey the United Nations. The State Department admitted this when it said in its letter of transmittal:

"It leaves to states themselves the basic obligation to protect entire human groups in their right to live. On the other hand, it is designed to insure international liability where state responsibility has not been properly discharged."

Furthermore, the State Department takes a narrow view of genocide. It is willing to accept the killing of one person as genocide. In the letter of transmittal appears this amazing paragraph:

"If an individual is murdered by another individual, or by a group, whether composed of private citizens or government officials, as part of a plan or with the intent to destroy one of the groups enumerated in Article II, the international legal crime of genocide is committed as well as the municipal-law crime of homicide."

X-Ray for Tumor of the Brain

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

CONTRARY to the general opinion, tumors of the brain can, and not infrequently do, develop in children. Even babies may have them, but most brain tumors seem to develop during the sixth year of life. Unfortunately, in the young child, a tumor may be present for some time before it discloses itself. Even with adults it cannot cause symptoms until it becomes large enough to block the flow of blood through the brain or to increase pressure within the skull cavity. This situation is postponed in the baby or young child because the bones of the skull can separate so easily along the sutures or lines where they are joined together. Thus, in the beginning, a tumor is likely to cause only an enlargement of the head.

Different Symptoms
Even when they appear, symptoms are different from those in the adult and far less definite. Perhaps the first symptom to appear is vomiting.

There may also be some sickness at the stomach or nausea. Symptoms may often be brought on by a cold or some other illness. The vomiting may stop for a time and then start again. Headache, also, develops in some cases. The headache usually occurs in the morning and frequently is accompanied by vomiting. The headache is made worse by stooping, coughing, or straining.

The third most common symptom is a staggering gait. It may begin gradually, and is often attributed to the weakness caused by the vomiting.

Convulsions appear in most cases. They may start with jerking of the face, arm, or leg. Double vision is a symptom which may appear as the tumor increases in size.

X-Ray of Skull

In all cases where a brain tumor is suspected, X-rays of the skull should be made. What is known as an electroencephalogram, or tracings of the brain waves, is helpful to show tumors of the front part of the brain and to tell the brain tumor from epilepsy.

What is known as a pneumoencephalogram is also useful. This procedure is carried out by injecting air into the brain cavity and then making X-ray plates. In practically all instances, it is possible, by careful study, to diagnose a brain tumor. Operation for its removal should be carried out without delay.

"I didn't say that," answered the doctor. "But that will give you pneumonia, and pneumonia I know how to cure."

The Outsiders

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

ABOUT half-past five of that same afternoon, his business in Cranford finished, George Culbert went into the Grill and Bar of the Colonial Inn and sat down in a booth in a corner. He always chose this booth because of the girl who waited on it, Sadie Rosinski. She was broad-faced and blunt-nosed, but her flesh had a clean pink firmness, and George Culbert ran his fingers along her forearm as he gave his order. "Iye and soda. Make it double, honey. I'm on top of the world today."

He felt, in truth, that he was. Everything was breaking right. He had not written to the Bendley Mills, he had phoned to them long distance. Direct talk would speed the matter up and it was more private to telephone from Cranford than in his office, where one of the mill men might come, any minute. He'd had the luck to get through to Morris Bendley, the big shot of the Bendley Mills. Morris Bendley had set a day, ten days off, for a conference and had agreed to drive up to New Interval.

Bendley had intimated that he wanted the sale, if it was there, closed with as little delay as possible. The red tape involved in clearing the people out of the valley would hold back the construction of the new dam and it was important to get at that as quickly as possible. Culbert, on his part, had admitted a willingness to hurry things.

Eliza had agreed with him this morning that it wasn't sense to throw good money after bad. Scare her along that line and she'd be ready enough to sign the valley away.

The breakdown of the beater had played into his hands, just as he had planned it should. Even with it patched up, as it would have to be, to forestall another accident, manufacturing would be slowed down. Miss Eliza Forrestal would see what that did to the profits! She could read her figures, at least. His figures!

He felt pretty certain that she did not know how much she had— if she did she would not swallow so easily the hard-up talk he dished out to her. Well, it wasn't up to him to enlighten her!

He ordered a steak and french-fried potatoes and a drink to top off his celebration.

He drove back to New Interval, very much satisfied with life in general and George Culbert in particular.

As he reached the Beebe house and slowed to turn in the drive, Marilyn Streeter's small figure darted out from the dark shadow of a tree, one hand lifted to signal him to stop. He stopped and she jerked the door open and jumped into the car.

She cried breathlessly, "I've been waiting forever, for you to come!" She wore her red sweater and a red flower in her hair.

"What's the idea?" But he grinned down into her face and he was already turning the car back into the road.

"I haven't seen you for such ages—I mean to be alone with you! John's gone over the hill—that old woman's dying, really dying, I guess, this time. The kid came for John. And I thought it was a chance—I saw you drive up the valley this afternoon and I've been nervous for you to come back. Take me somewhere, George!"

Nervousness threaded her voice, her hand slipped under his arm and and clung to it.

"Where?" The quality of George Culbert's smile changed a little. A mile or so down the road was an abandoned farmhouse and barn, George Culbert remembered. Not so far away but that they could be back before John Streeter got home.

"Last night—my party, I mean, it was awful, wasn't it, George?" "I thought everything went off all right."

"Oh, it was horridly dull! That Jeremy Penny—I never met such a stick. And I don't think Eliza Forrestal's much better. George, you don't like her more than you do me, do you? Bringing her last night, and taking her home..."

"I have to keep a stand-in for her," put in George, in a conciliatory tone. "Jealous, were you, baby?"

"I could have torn out Eliza Forrestal's eyes! Yours, too. And it was really just that? Keeping a stand-in with her? I don't know why I didn't think of it, after the things you've said to me about liking me. More than any girl you ever met—all that."

"Did I ever say that?" "You know you did! You're teasing me!" She drew a sharp, desperate breath. "Oh, I wish we could drive and drive and never go back to New Interval!"

The low bulk of the farmhouse suddenly had loomed up at his left. He swung the car to the side of the road, stopped the motor.

Marilyn sat up straight. "Why are we stopping? I meant..."

"To kiss you," said George Culbert.

He laughed, and with a little cry she slid out of the car. He saw her fall on the steep incline going down the road, but she got up again and ran on and then darkness swallowed her.

Sobs choked her breathing and her ankle hurt painfully where it had been wrenched when she fell, but Marilyn ran on through the darkness. To get away was her only thought. To get home...

Oh, she hated him, hated him. Then she heard what she had feared—the rattle of a car behind her. Terrified, she stumbled down into the ditch at the side of the road, threw herself flat, face down in it, her arms up over her head. But the headlights picked her up. The car came to a stop, and the next moment a man's voice said over her, "What's the matter?"

Marilyn struggled to her feet. "I—I hurt my ankle!"

"That all? Thought you'd been hit by a car. That you were dead, way you lay. Say, you're the doctor's wife?"

He was a young man, big of build. He was wearing the denim mill men wore and an old windbreaker. He was scowling as he regarded Marilyn. "I'll give you a lift back, if your ankle's hurt."

"Oh, if you will, please," Sobs still shook Marilyn's voice.

He put out a hand and helped her out of the ditch and into the car. He was still scowling darkly but Marilyn was too grateful to sink back into the seat of the car to care what he might be thinking of her.

He did not speak as they drove to New Interval. Nor did Marilyn, drawn into her corner, sick from the pain of her ankle, more sick with burning hatred.

They reached the valley, the house. The young man stopped the car.

"Thanks, a—a lot."

Labor Leaders Ignore Lewis | University of Missouri Has In Latest Move for Unity | Five-Year Wait for Truman

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—The American Federation of Labor by a subtle piece of maneuvering has left John L. Lewis out of the movement for labor unity. What happened is this:

Several weeks ago CIO President Philip Murray proposed that the CIO, AFL, the railroad unions, Lewis and other independents set up a committee to talk about merging labor unions into one national organization. Lewis quickly accepted the invitation to participate.

The AFL waited some time, however, and then accepted after proposing a modification of the CIO plan. Its idea is that committees representing the AFL and CIO should sit down and discuss the matter. Nothing was said about Lewis taking part.

The expectation is that Lewis will have his say about the snub when he thinks the time propitious. But the AFL leaders make no secret of the fact that they want no part of him.

● TRUMAN RELENTS—President Truman will settle a personal matter of some delicacy June 9 when he delivers the commencement address at the University of Missouri and accepts from the university an honorary LL.D. degree.

Since he became President, Mr. Truman has been "too busy" to accept a degree from his home state university, although he found time to accept various other honorary degrees, including one from small William Jewell college at Liberty, Mo.

Persons close to the situation say the reason the President has been "too busy" is that the University of Missouri studiously passed him over when he was in the Senate. It took occasion, meanwhile, to give an honorary degree to Bennett Champ Clark, at the time his Senate colleague.

After Mr. Truman became President, the university sought to make amends, according to the story. But the President waited five years to respond.

● GIs GET AN AIR FORCE—Recent events prove that the Air Force is doing everything it can within its budget to provide ground force support, a phase of the defense effort which Army generals declare was being neglected. Latest proof was the announcement of the Republic P-96-A fighter.

When the Air Force unveiled the plane it said it would serve two purposes, long range escort and low level bombing. The P-96-A is the fourth such type to be given the additional task of low level work, obviously to support ground forces.

The new plane, like the others, will have a speed of 700 miles an hour or better and will carry "external armament." That means rockets, probably the "mighty mouse," a 2.75 inch job that, fired from a speeding plane, will have the punch of a 75-millimeter cannon.

● MOSCOW NOTES—Reports trickling into the State department indicate that Moscow is not exactly a paradise for the motorist, especially if he is looking for gas.

Although the city is believed to have a population of seven million, it has only 49 filling stations with 120 pumps, according to the reports.

Complaints are being made by some of the more reckless Russian citizens that only half of these pumps are automatic, that they are not fully used, and are frequently empty because gasoline supplies have not been delivered.

Anyhow a comrade named N. Sidorov made such complaints to a Moscow newspaper. There has been no indication as to what N. Sidorov's situation may be at present.

Helen Lucile Pontius Wed To Elvin Strickler In Sunday Afternoon Rites

Rev. Troutman Reads Nuptials

A handkerchief of Brussels lace was tucked in the sleeve of her white satin wedding gown when Miss Helen Lucile Pontius became the bride of Elvin Richard Strickler Sunday afternoon. The handkerchief and the single strand of pearls she wore were gifts from a friend in Holland.

The double ring ceremony in Trinity Lutheran church was read by the Rev. George Troutman at the open church wedding before an altar banked with palms, ferns and evergreens. Two large vases of white flowers, gladioli, snapdragons and lilies were placed on either side of the altar and a third arrangement decorated the pulpit.

Candles in seven branched candelabra lighted the front of the church where the bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Pontius of Pickaway Township, and the bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Strickler of Amanda Route 2, exchanged vows.

William E. Strehle of Stoutsville, brother-in-law of the bride, was soloist. He was accompanied by Mrs. Karl Herrmann at the organ. Preceding the ceremony he sang "Always" and "O Jesus Have Promised." Later he sang "The Lord's Prayer."

Miss Donna Jean Kerns, in a pale blue gown, and Miss Marilyn Armstrong in a dress of magenta, lighted the candles on the altar.

The bride's gown of candlelight satin was fashioned with fitted bodice, long tight sleeves and a full skirt with chapel train. Her veil of finger-tip imported tulle edged in lace was held in place by a beaded coronet. The sweetheart neckline of her gown was trimmed in scrolls of tiny seed pearls.

She carried a white Bible ornamented with white rose buds and a purple throat orchid tied with white satin ribbon.

Miss Mabel Kathleen Holbrook of Stoutsville was maid-of-honor. She wore a pink dress and large open crown hat of matching color. Her bouquet was made of cerise carnations and white feverfew.

One of the bride's maids, Miss Mary Ellen Young, was gownned in a dress of yellow. Her matching yellow bonnet was crowned with daisies. She carried a bouquet of powder pink carnations tied with matching pink satin ribbon.

The other bride's maid was Miss Sarah Zeigler of Duncan, Pa. She was attired in pale blue with matching bonnet and her flowers were pale yellow carnations tied with matching yellow satin ribbon.

The best man was Elbert Strickler, brother of the bridegroom.

Serving as ushers were Richard Benadum of Amanda, Eugene Kerns, both cousins of the bride, and Edward Schweikert of Anderson, Ind.

Mrs. Pontius greeted the 200 guests at the wedding reception in a navy blue gown. She wore an orchid at her shoulder. The bridegroom's mother was in pale blue. Her corsage was also an orchid.

Trinity Lutheran parish house, the scene of the reception, was decorated in Summer flowers. A three-tier wedding cake centered the lace covered table. Lighted white tapers in crystal holders were other decorations.

Ray Beery of Circleville played the solo vox during the reception. Hostesses included Miss Evelyn Reichelderfer of Stoutsville, Miss Donna Jean Kerns, Miss Ava Kerns of Lancaster and Mrs. Louis Lockhart. Miss Marilyn Armstrong of Amanda served at the punch table.

The couple left for a wedding trip in New England immediately after the reception. For this, the new Mrs. Strickler changed to a navy blue suit with white accessories.

The bride, a graduate of Pickaway Township high school, has been employed for the last 10 years in a local insurance office.

Mr. Strickler, a graduate of Amanda high school, is well known as a Fairfield County recreational director, active in Grange and 4-H club work. At present he is engaged in farming.

The couple will reside on Amanda Route 2.

Junior Women Schedule Picnic

Circleville Junior Women's Club will hold a family picnic in Ted Lewis Park Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Henry Reid Jr., spokesman for the group, said the affair would get underway about 5:30 p. m. with a play period for youngsters. The picnic dinner will follow in the shelter house.

Payne-Turner Wedding Read In Calvary EUB

When Miss Phyllis Payne and Robert Turner were married Sunday afternoon, Calvary Evangelical United Brethren church in Circleville was the scene of the wedding.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Payne of Chillicothe Route 1. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Jennings Turner of Town street and the late Mr. Turner. The Rev. James Herbst performed the ceremony before a candle-lighted altar decorated with palms and baskets of Spring flowers.

The bride was given in marriage by her father.

She wore a gown of white brocade moire fashioned with a tight bodice, long sleeves and very full skirt. The short peplum terminated in a cathedral train. A tiara of material matching the gown held her two tiered veil of sheer illusion in place. Her cascade bouquet was made of red roses and white shattered carnations entwined with ivy.

The maid-of-honor, Miss Mary Lee Payne, sister of the bride was attired in a gown of pink moire made in a fashion somewhat similar to that of the bride's. Her sleeves were cap style. She wore pink matching mitts and a pink headress with a circular veil. Her flowers were mixed carnations.

Mary Ruth Thompson of Chillicothe Route 1 was flower girl in a sky blue floor length frock and a matching coronet. She carried a basket of Spring flowers.

Best man was Jennings Turner II, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers were Philip Payne and David Payne, brothers of the bride.

Miss Patty Britton, soloist, accompanied by Mrs. James Herbst, sang "Because" and "My Hero" preceding the ceremony. "The Lord's Prayer" was also a selection.

At the reception for the immediate families and a few close friends in Court-Main restaurant, a three-tier wedding cake centered the table.

Mrs. Payne received guests in a navy blue suit with white accessories and a shoulder corsage of red roses. The bridegroom's mother wore black with white accessories. Her flowers were pink roses.

For their wedding trip to Florida by way of Washington D. C., the bride wore a pink suit with navy blue accessories and white carnations from the bridal bouquet.

The new Mrs. Turner is a Kingston high school graduate and attended Ohio State university. Mr. Turner also attended Ohio State university. He is a graduate of Circleville high school. He is employed by a Columbus grocery.

After June 18, the couple will be at home to friends in their residence on Williamsport pike.

James William Martin, of route 4, Lewisburg, Tenn., has been a familiar and popular figure at thousands of old-fashioned entertainments throughout Tennessee since he was just a boy. The old-timers claim that young Bill can really make a bull fiddle talk "sweet music."

These fans really missed Martin's music when he did not appear in his regular program on the great 50,000 watt WLAC radio station in Nashville, Tenn., recently. In fact, they missed him for the two weeks that he suffered the horrors of nervous indigestion and kindred ills.

They will be happy to know now that Bill is back with the bull fiddle. It seems to some that the music is just a little sweeter because Bill feels better now than he ever did before, because he has learned the blessings of HADACOL. His deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron are now being overcome by taking HADACOL.

Here is Martin's own statement about the blessings that HADACOL brought to him: "I am only 24 years old but have suffered with the horrors of nervous indigestion. No food I ate digested well. I suffered severe headaches. I had difficulty sleeping. I have played with radio bands and nervous indigestion affected my work. I was run down and nervous and for a time thought I would have to give up my work. After the second bottle of HADACOL, I felt better and now after five bottles of HADACOL I feel like I am a new man. I am going to continue to take HADACOL to help keep well."

Mrs. Paul Gearhart of near Yellowbud will entertain members of Westminster Bible class of Presbyterian church at a carry-in luncheon in her home at 1 p. m. Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brown of South Scioto street and Mrs. Lillie B. Stout of West Water street attended the Saturday wedding in Flatrock Michigan of Miss Lillian Stephens and William C. Bice. The bridegroom is the grandson of Mrs. Stout and the nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Brown. The Browns returned Sunday. Mrs. Stout remained in Michigan where she visited her daughter, Mrs. C. M. Bice of Dundee.

Helen Lucile Pontius Wed To Elvin Strickler In Sunday Afternoon Rites

Rev. Troutman Reads Nuptials

A handkerchief of Brussels lace was tucked in the sleeve of her white satin wedding gown when Miss Helen Lucile Pontius became the bride of Elvin Strickler Sunday afternoon. The handkerchief and the single strand of pearls she wore were gifts from a friend in Holland.

The double ring ceremony in Trinity Lutheran church was read by the Rev. George Troutman at the open church wedding before an altar banked with palms, ferns and evergreens. Two large vases of white flowers, gladioli, snapdragons and lilies were placed on either side of the altar and a third arrangement decorated the pulpit.

Candles in seven branched candelabra lighted the front of the church where the bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Pontius of Pickaway Township, and the bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Strickler of Amanda Route 2, exchanged vows.

William E. Strehle of Stoutsville, brother-in-law of the bride, was soloist. He was accompanied by Mrs. Karl Herrmann at the organ. Preceding the ceremony he sang "Always" and "O Jesus Have Promised." Later he sang "The Lord's Prayer."

Miss Donna Jean Kerns, in a pale blue gown, and Miss Marilyn Armstrong in a dress of magenta, lighted the candles on the altar.

The bride's gown of candlelight satin was fashioned with fitted bodice, long tight sleeves and a full skirt with chapel train. Her veil of finger-tip imported tulle edged in lace was held in place by a beaded coronet. The sweetheart neckline of her gown was trimmed in scrolls of tiny seed pearls.

She carried a white Bible ornamented with white rose buds and a purple throat orchid tied with white satin ribbon.

Miss Mabel Kathleen Holbrook of Stoutsville was maid-of-honor in a powder pink dress and large open crown hat of matching color. Her bouquet was made of cerise carnations and white feverfew.

One of the bride's maids, Miss Mary Ellen Young, was gowned in a dress of yellow. Her matching yellow bonnet was crowned with daisies. She carried a bouquet of powder pink carnations tied with matching pink satin ribbon.

The other bride's maid was Miss Sarah Zeigler of Duncan, Pa. She was attired in pale blue with matching bonnet and her flowers were pale yellow carnations tied with matching yellow satin ribbon.

The best man was Elbert Strickler, brother of the bridegroom.

Serving as ushers were Richard Benadum of Amanda, Eugene Kerns, both cousins of the bride, and Edward Schweikert of Anderson, Ind.

Mrs. Pontius greeted the 200 guests at the wedding reception in a navy blue gown. She wore an orchid at her shoulder. The bridegroom's mother was in pale blue. Her corsage was also an orchid.

Trinity Lutheran parish house, the scene of the reception, was decorated in Summer flowers. A three-tier wedding cake centered the lace covered table. Lighted white tapers in crystal holders were other decorations.

Ray Beery of Circleville played the solo during the reception. Hostesses included Miss Evelyn Reichelderfer of Stoutsville, Miss Donna Jean Kerns, Miss Ava Kerns of Lancaster and Mrs. Louis Lockhart. Miss Marilyn Armstrong of Amanda served at the punch table.

The couple left for a wedding trip in New England immediately after the reception. For this, the new Mrs. Strickler changed to a navy blue suit with white accessories.

The bride, a graduate of Pickaway Township high school, has been employed for the last 10 years in a local insurance office.

Mr. Strickler, a graduate of Amanda high school, is well known as a Fairfield County recreational director, active in Grange and 4-H club work. At present he is engaged in farming.

The couple will reside on Amanda Route 2.

Stoutsville Church Scene Of Wedding

Miss Mary Ellen Kirkpatrick and Lloyd Dudley Meyer exchanged wedding vows Sunday afternoon at a marriage service read by the Rev. Wilson Forbush in Heidelberg Evangelical and Reformed church of Stoutsville.

Lighted white tapers in seven branched candelabra, huckleberry foliage and white snapdragons formed the setting before which the ceremony was performed. The bride's nephews, Michael and Timothy Kirkpatrick, lighted the candles.

The bride was escorted and given in marriage by her father, J. R. Kirkpatrick.

Her gown was a floor length white organza with shoulder length veil and matching mitts. She carried a colonial bouquet of lilies of the valley centered with a white orchid.

Miss Lucille Kirkwood, maid-of-honor, was attired in a floor length dress of yellow organza with matching headress and mitts. Her colonial bouquet was of pink rosebuds and blue carnations tied with blue ribbon.

Ken Roth of Chicago served as best man. Ushers were Charles W. Kirkpatrick of Circleville and Donald Meyers of Stoutsville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

The program of music preceding the ceremony was presented by Miss Jeannette Wenrich, pianist, and Vance Crites, soloist.

The bride's mother wore brown and white with a corsage of pink shattered carnations. The bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Donald Meyers, wore a dress of navy blue with white accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations.

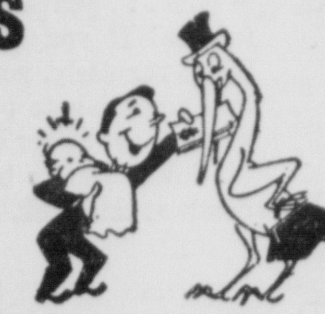

A reception for members of the wedding party and of the immediate families was held in the home of the bride's parents. The house was decorated throughout with arrangements of roses. A wedding cake with miniature bride couple was the table centerpiece.

The new Mrs. Meyer is a graduate of Circleville high school and Dickinson secretarial college, Columbus.

Mr. Meyer, a graduate of Proviso high school, Maywood, Ill., attended Illinois Institute of Technology. He is now employed in Chicago where they will reside.

James William Martin, of route 4, Lewisburg, Tenn., has been a familiar and popular figure at thousands of old-fashioned entertainments throughout Tennessee since he was just a boy. The old-timers claim that young Bill can really make a bull fiddle talk "sweet music."

These fans really missed Martin's music when he did not appear in his regular program on the great 50,000 watt WLAC radio station in Nashville, Tenn., recently. In fact, they missed him for the two weeks that he suffered the horrors of nervous indigestion and kindred ills.

They will be happy to know now that Bill is back with the bull fiddle. It seems to some that the music is just a little sweeter because Bill feels better now than he ever did before, because he has learned the blessings of HADACOL. His deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron are now being overcome by taking HADACOL.

Here is Martin's own statement about the blessings that HADACOL brought to him: "I am only 24 years old but have suffered with the horrors of nervous indigestion. No food I ate digested well. I suffered severe headaches. I had difficulty sleeping. I have played with radio bands and nervous indigestion affected my work. I was run down and nervous and for a time thought I would have to give up my work. After the second bottle of HADACOL, I felt better and now after five bottles of HADACOL I feel like I am a new man. I am going to continue to take HADACOL to help keep well." (C)1950, The LeBlanc Corporation

European Farm Output Improving

Specialist Tells Present Status

WASHINGTON, June 5—A specialist in European agricultural economics reports that Western European agriculture is developing faster today than after World War I, but is lagging behind population increases.

J. H. Richter, European specialist of the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations, says that current farm production in nations receiving Marshall Plan aid is within five percent of prewar population.

Richter says that although European farm recovery is going faster after World War II than after World War I, and almost near normal prewar production—the population in those countries has grown 10 percent above prewar population.

The specialist suggests that if the weather during the 1948-49 season had been more favorable—farm production would have reached prewar production instead of coming only within 20 percent of it. Last year was a year of droughts in many sections of Europe.

Only countries which have not shown swift recovery are Western Germany and Austria. Agricultural output in those countries "has remained at a comparatively depressed level," although somewhat higher than during the immediate postwar period.

COUNTRIES that have made the quickest postwar recovery, Richter says, are Belgium, The Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and the United Kingdom.

The difficulty in Western Germany and in Austria, Richter points out, is largely due to the "lag in livestock recovery" in these countries, with output of animal products only about two-thirds of prewar.

Richter says Denmark, France, and Ireland are in intermediate recovery positions, having reached more than 95 percent of prewar output.

He says that there is some question about whether Greece and Portugal have reached prewar production, but Switzerland and Italy, he feels sure, have attained total output similar to that of the late 'thirties.

The large improvement in most countries this year, he says, is due to favorable weather and increased imports of feed stuffs. Richter gives credit for the improvement also to larger input of fertilizer, greater mechanization and "some" improvements in cultivation, feeding practices and general farm management.

OFL Backing Dem Candidates

COLUMBUS, June 5—State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, Democrat candidate for the U.S. Senate, and all other state Democrat congressional candidates today have the endorsement of the Ohio Federation of Labor's Educational and Political League.

Phil Hannah, secretary of the league, vehemently demanded the repeal of the Taft-Hartley law and the defeat of Sen. Robert A. Taft, Ohio's "Mr. Republican." He said:

"In 1950, we must elect to Congress and the state legislature men who will free us from the restrictive legislation under which we are forced to operate on both the federal and state levels."

Republican Chiefs Predict Huge Victory In Pennsylvania Poll

WASHINGTON, June 5—The Republican high command is so confident today of a Republican landslide in Pennsylvania next November it predicts a gain of four to six house seats in the Keystone State.

Republicans generally believe they have a "powerful ticket" in Gov. James H. Duff as the senatorial candidate and Judge John S. Fine, of Wilkes-Barre, as the nominee for governor.

The Duff-Fine ticket is opposed by Democrat Senator Francis J. Myers and Richardson Dilworth, Philadelphia city treasurer.

GOP spokesmen say the party is solidified behind the Duff-Fine ticket, despite the bitter intra-party warfare in the primary. The Duff group defeated a ticket

6-Inch Herring Is Key In Trial

CHICAGO, June 5—A six-inch herring will be brought to court today as the state's exhibit "A" against Robert Kramer, 29, of Chicago.

The fish will serve as evidence when Kramer appears to answer charges of fishing without a license in Lake Michigan and resisting arrest.

A conservation officer said Kramer scuffled with him after the fish was seized on behalf of the state of Illinois.

Bakers Strike

CINCINNATI, June 5—Twelve hundred Cincinnati bakers, members of the AFL Bakery and Confectioners Union, have voted to strike to back up their wage increase demands.

The gasoline pump was invented by Sylvanus F. Bowser, Fort Wayne, Ind., in 1885.

Blind School Alumni Meet

COLUMBUS, June 5—Some 300 graduates of the Ohio State School for the Blind agreed that it was good to "see" their former classmates again.

Someone would hear a voice, stop and find the person. Alumni members attended the reunion in Columbus were happy to be back in the old school.

Robert N. Marshall, retiring president of the alumni group, and his wife, both blind, were host and hostess to the reunion. Both are Columbus residents. Schuyler Houck of Columbus was named new president of the association. He is an instructor at the school.

65,000 Catholics Pray For Peace

CLEVELAND, June 5—About 65,000 Roman Catholic worshippers of the Cleveland diocese prayed for world peace at the Holy Name Society Holy Hour in Cleveland Stadium last night.

For the solemn religious rite, the stadium was turned into a great open air cathedral dominated by a 55-foot altar holding a 36-foot oil painting of Our Lady of Fatima.

In the 1946 election, the Republicans carried the House, aided a good bit by winning 28 out of Pennsylvania's 33 congressional seats. In 1948, while President Truman lost the state, the Democrats won 16 out of the 33 seats. They lost one of these last September in a special election. The Pennsylvania delegation now stands: 15 Democrats, 18 Republicans.

Deserter Says Flip Reds Promised Ambassadorship

MANILA, June 5—A 20-year-old U. S. Army private, wanted as a deserter, has related how he joined the Filipino Communist Party and became a colonel in the Hukbalahap rebel army.

Private Ronald Dorsey of Palmer, Mass., said he took with the rebels in the hope that he would be appointed a Communist ambassador after a projected Philippine Red revolt in 1952.

Dorsey surrendered Saturday to the Philippine army 50 miles north of Manila.

The young soldier said he deserted the U. S. Army's Twenty-Ninth Topographical Battalion last August to become a Huk regional administrative officer.

Dorsey, clad in a dirty khaki Huk uniform, said:

"They promised me the ambassadorship of some country after the revolution."

He described an elaborate radio hookup which he said the Huk have with Chinese Communist headquarters in Peiping, and added:

"WE RECEIVED a lot of propaganda from China."

Dorsey said the Filipino Communists told him the present Philippine government would be overthrown in two years.

When asked why he finally gave himself up, Dorsey said: "I had the idea of surrendering ever since I deserted."

He reported that the rebel Huk have 20,000 men, including guerrilla "shock" troops in training in the Sierra Madre mountains on Luzon Island.

Regarding reports that other Americans have deserted to the Filipino rebels, Dorsey said:

"I have heard of several Negro Americans assigned to higher guerrilla headquarters, but never met them."

Dorsey said he was recruited for the Filipino Communist Party by a tavern acquaintance.

Philippine army intelligence officers said Dorsey turned over to them valuable Communist documents and pointed out that the American is the "highest ranking Huk to fall into our hands."

Dorsey is scheduled to be returned to the U. S. Army for court-martial as a deserter.

First Methodist Church Losing Its Minister

Dr. Elisha Kneisley, pastor of Circleville First Methodist church the last three years, has preached his last sermon here.

The minister announced from the pulpit Sunday morning that he would be assigned to another congregation.

Rev. Mr. Kneisley, only minister in the Circleville area holding a doctor of philosophy degree, declared in his statement that "the rank and file of members of this church should know why this action was taken." He explained:

"I have been advised by the present district superintendent and previous superintendents as well as by previous ministers here that a small minority within this church demands a change of pastors every two or three years."

"I do not know who your next pastor will be, but I hope that for the good of the church he will be allowed more than two or three years to do his work."

"A MINISTER cannot be expected to get acquainted with a congregation of 800 members in less time."

Dr. George Wilson of Lancaster, the local district superintendent, has said that "because of local circumstances, if I were Dr. Kneisley, I would not remain in Circleville. It is one of the most difficult churches in the district."

Diplomats Plan Extending Drive In Cold War To Scientific Front

WASHINGTON, June 5—The State Department planned today to extend its Cold War diplomatic activity to the scientific front.

Under a plan proposed by Dr. Lloyd V. Berkner, physicist at Carnegie Institute, a scientific expert would be assigned to the department itself. He will supervise a new group of scientists who will be assigned to Western diplomatic embassies and legations.

In addition he proposes the sending of scientific missions to Germany and Japan to garner whatever developments are being made in their laboratories.

Barkner was assigned to tackle the problem several months ago when the State Department was informed that the U. S. lags from two to five years behind many countries in some fields of development.

Thus far effective exchanges are being maintained in the scientific field only with London. Even here, the exchange of atomic information is restricted by present law. The same prohibition would apply to all other countries as long as present law is in force.

Officials made plain that there is no intention to violate or change this law through the Berkner proposals.

Plans to ask modification of the restraints on exchanges with Britain and Canada, leaders in research on the subject, were temporarily abandoned following the conviction in London of Klaus Fuchs, a German Communist physicist, who worked on the A-bomb in the United States, for having given information to Moscow. Berkner said:

"We in America are dangerously prone to underestimate the importance of foreign scientific progress."

He also reported that U. S. scientists regard the State Department as "inaccessible and non-sympathetic." He added:

"The existence of the Cold War sharpens the need for examination of the question of whether our government is organized to face squarely the major problems of science and foreign relations that currently confront us."

New Bug Killer Comes From Weed

WASHINGTON, June 5—Experimenters of the Agricultural Research Administration have rushed into print with the announcement they have discovered a new insecticide.

What is so wonderful about it, they say, is that the new insecticide is made from weeds, principally from what is commonly known as ox-eye.

They say they don't know too much about how many and exactly what kind of insects it will kill. But they do know it does a clean job on houseflies.

And who knows, one scientist says, maybe the insecticide made from weeds will form the basis of "a new important agricultural crop."

Rev. Mr. Kneisley, only minister in the Circleville area holding a doctor of philosophy degree, declared in his statement that "the rank and file of members of this church should know why this action was taken." He explained:

TERMITES

Cause damage in excess of fifty million dollars annually for REPAIRS alone. These destructive pests work in secret and may be destroying your property NOW. Have it inspected by an expert and be sure. There is no charge for the inspection, and if your property is not infested they will tell you so. If termites are present you will be SHOWN a fair price quoted for a treatment which is guaranteed for TEN YEARS.

Many irresponsible amateurs—self-styled "exterminators" and "part-time" entomologists offer fantastic "guarantees" and bargain prices, but you owe it to yourself to be SURE you are securing the services of a thoroughly reliable and FINANCIALLY RESPONSIBLE company whose guarantee really has a meaning.

An effective termite treatment must not only eliminate the termites now present in the structure, but also prevent the countless thousands of others, who live in the GROUND outside the house, from returning.

The almost unbelievable cunning of the termite makes the successful treatment of your property a job for those who have the proper equipment and the KNOW HOW. Further, because of the termites tenacity and persistence it is sometimes impossible to completely exterminate them with ONE treatment. Therefore it is vital that the company doing the job be AVAILABLE later to return if necessary. Unless you are SURE of this fact you may find yourself with a "Guarantee" but no one STILL IN BUSINESS to MAKE GOOD.

Always remember—a guarantee is only as good as the man who gives it.

We are local representatives of a reputable and FINANCIALLY RESPONSIBLE company who are ACCREDITED MEMBERS OF THE OHIO PEST CONTROL ASSOCIATION.

Strike Idleness Found Down During April

WASHINGTON, June 5 — The Labor Department has reported a 15 percent decline in total strike idleness during April, despite an increase of 50 percent in new strikes that month.

Strike idleness in all work stoppages in effect during the month dropped from approximately 3,750,000 man-days in March to 3,150,000 in April. The Chrysler walkout, which was not ended until May 4, accounted for about 60 percent of the idleness.

A survey by the Bureau of Labor Statistics showed a rise from the 260 new strikes affecting 80,000 workers which began in March to 400 in April involving 160,000 employees.

Total stoppages in April, both old and new walkouts, were substantially greater in number than in March, but they affected fewer workers. There were 550 stoppages in effect in April, involving 300,000 workers; in March 400 strikes idling 530,000 workers.

BLS officials said the strike idleness for the first four months of 1950 is somewhat higher than in any year except the big wave of walkouts in the immediate postwar period in 1946.

For the first four months of this year, strike idleness totaled 17,400,000 man days. In the same period of 1946, there were 70.7 million man-days of idleness.

A survey by the Bureau of Labor Statistics showed a rise from

During April

WASHINGTON, June 5 — The Labor Department has reported a 15 percent decline in total strike idleness during April, despite an increase of 30 percent in new strikes that month.

Strike idleness in all work stoppages in effect during the month dropped from approximately 3,750,000 man-days in March to 3,150,000 in April. The Chrysler walkout, which was not ended until May 4, accounted for about 60 percent of the idleness.

A survey by the Bureau of Labor Statistics showed a rise from the 260 new strikes affecting 80,000 workers which began in March to 400 in April involving 160,000 employees.

Total stoppages in April, both old and new walkouts, were substantially greater in number than in March, but they affected fewer workers. There were 550 stoppages in effect in April, involving 300,000 workers; in March 400 strikes idling 530,000 workers.

BLS officials said the strike idleness for the first four months of 1950 is somewhat higher than in any year except the big wave of walkouts in the immediate postwar period in 1946.

For the first four months of this year, strike idleness totaled 17,400,000 man days. In the same period of 1946, there were 70.7 million man-days of idleness.

11-10 Decision Ends Contest

Stoutsville Merchants held the upper hand Sunday over Circleville Merchants in one of the most closely contested rivalry matches of the season.

Spiced with protests (two by Circleville manager Frank Wilkins), high scores, fumble-itis and raucous catcalls from both benches, the contest ended with an 11-10 victory for Stoutsville in the 10th inning.

Four pitchers were fed into the lineup during the contest, two for each team, as both teams fattened their batting averages during the hot match.

Circleville opened scoring with one run in the first inning of the game, although Stoutsville bounced back in the second to collect four runs on a pair of hits and two errors.

The Circleville team knotted the score at 4-4 during the next inning by tallying three runs, while Stoutsville again took over the lead with a single in the last half of the inning.

STOUTSVILLE gained an 8-4 advantage to close out the fourth inning by marking up a trio of runs, due to the large bat of Stoutsville Rightfielder Harold Stonerock.

Stonerock powdered a ball over the head of Centerfielder Jack Hennis with the bases loaded, although being thrown out at third when he tried to stretch the double into a triple.

Circleville evened the count at 8-4 during the next two innings by scoring two runs in each.

Both teams were held scoreless during the next two innings and the rhubarb began in the ninth.

Circleville opened the way for a win in the first of the ninth by scoring a single. Stoutsville, with men on second and third, attempted a squeeze play on an infield out to knot the score.

A Stoutsville runner, trapped between home and third, dashed in to score the tying run when a toss from Catcher Warren Grover to the third baseman hit the runner's arm.

Manager Wilkins entered his first protest then, claiming that the runner intentionally had hit the ball.

The second of the rhubarbs happened in the final 10th inning, although few of the persons attending the match were aware of it.

Circleville again had scored a single run to lead off the extra inning. With two down, via strikeouts by Circleville hurler Jack Hix, a replacement hurler, High School Player Good, leaped across the plate on his third strike to rap out a double into left-centerfield, scoring winning runs from second and third.

MANAGER WILKINS again launched a protest, claiming that the player had batted out of turn.

Stoutsville scored its 11 runs on eight hits and seven Circleville errors, while Circleville netted 10 runs on 11 hits, two Stoutsville errors and a total of 11 free passes to first base.

The Sunday match practically was a Circleville vs. Circleville affair, since all but two of the starting Stoutsville players hailed from Circleville. One of the two other players was a Tarlton boy.

The win gave Stoutsville a record of three wins in four starts in Tri-County League competition, while the loss was Circleville's second in five league starts.

Jack Hardwick Named To All Ohio Track Team

Big Jack Hardwick of Walnut Township, Ohio Class B high-jump champion, has been named to the 1950 All-Ohio track team.

Hardwick, who won his state high-jump championship with a leap of 6'1", was selected for the All-Ohio berth by the Ohio Association of track coaches.

The 6'4" popular amateur Township lad was one of 31 Ohio boys named to the "B" selection. He was the only representative from the Pickaway County area.

Also named to the list were William Garland of Greensburg, last year's high-jump champ and runnerup to Hardwick this year, and other high-jump runnerup Mike Aman of Clyde.

CIRCLEVILLE failed to receive a mention in the "A" selection, since it did not participate in the state meet this Spring.

However, Charles Viney of Chillicothe, who competed against the locals this season, was named to the select group in both the 440-yard dash and mile relay.

The Chillicothe athlete was the only "A" athlete from neighboring cities, excepting Columbus, who was named to the All-Ohio list.

Woman Jockey Loser In Race

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., June 5.—Mrs. Wantha Davis, credited with being America's premier woman jockey, has been beaten for the second time in nine appearances at Agua Caliente racetrack.

She wound up a badly beaten third yesterday in her match race with Ralph Neves and Basil Neves.

Neves, astride Mr. and Mrs. Fred Marmet's Easy Fibber, was an easy victor in the six-furlong affair in 1:11 3-5.

James piloted J. T. Nissing's Silver Fire to second place seven lengths ahead of Wantha, aboard Mrs. Helen Hyde's Timtel.

Savold Favored Over Woodcock

LONDON, June 5.—America's Lee Savold and Great Britain's Bruce Woodcock were both ready, willing and confident today for their 15-round bout tomorrow night for the British and European versions of the world heavyweight championship.

When Woodcock was informed that the hard-punching Savold fractured a sparring partner's jaw Saturday, the Britisher quipped: "They can't scare me." Bookmakers are more impressed, however, and Savold has been established a four to seven favorite.

Yanks' Top Hurler Wanted Only First Baseman Job

NEW YORK, June 5.—Ed Lopat, the chunky, red-haired southpaw of the New York Yankees and the winningest pitcher in the American League today, had a childhood yearning to become a hard-hitting first baseman.

That was the reason Lopat, a native New Yorker, never tried out with the Yankees. A fellow named Lou Gehrig was holding down that spot in the Stadium at the time. So young Ed packed his gear and hustled over to the Giants and Dodgers for tryouts.

Lopat made out with the Brooks and was sent into their farm system in 1937. He made the switch from first base to the box, kicked around the bushes for eight seasons and then landed with the Chicago White Sox.

When George Weiss took over as general manager for the Yankees in 1948, Lopat was brought to the home of champions—as a pitcher.

The move was worthwhile. Lopat won 17 games in '48 and 15 last season, both times leading the New York pitching corps in the all-important earned run department. Then there was something else.

STEADY EDDY had acquired a habit the Yankees liked from the start. He always could beat the Cleveland Indians. Take it from Lou Boudreau, you can say that again.

Lopat was the guy who blanked the Tribe, 7 to 0, yesterday on six hits. It gave him that league-leading seventh win. And Ed, who'll be 32 years old this month, now has a lifetime mark of 24 wins and only six losses against Cleveland.

The victory kept the pace-setting Yankee two and a half lengths ahead of the Detroit Tigers, who won their fifth straight, 3 to 0 over the Washington Senators.

The slugging Boston Red Sox slammed the White Sox, 17 to 7. The McCarthy men collected a total of 21 hits off four Chicago hurlers.

The St. Louis Browns walloped the Philadelphia Athletics, 12 to 5 in the first game, but the A's came back to take the nightcap, 13 to 6 and keep the Brownie in the cellar.

Max Lanier pitched and batted the St. Louis Cardinals back into a tie for first place with Brooklyn in the National League.

Lanier tripled home three runs and held the Philadelphia Phillies to eight hits as the Cardinals won, 6 to 2.

Chicago's pesky Cubs scored nine runs in the first two innings off three Dodger hurlers and

Silo Tips Detailed By Farm Expert

Varied Conditions Are Outlined

"Will untreated forages keep in the silo?" is a common question from Ohio farmers this time of year.

And Larry Best, Pickaway County agricultural agent has the answer: "Yes, if the ensiling excludes the air and meets other necessary conditions."

The local farm expert says that findings made by Charles F. Rogers of the agronomy department of the Ohio Experiment Station near Wooster bring proof.

Ground grains or molasses, when added to condition crops to make better eating silage, do most good on moist crops. Their good effects are less noticeable in silages made from wilted crops or those that have reached an advanced bloom stage before harvesting.

"In general," Rogers says, "when you fill a silo with young green crops within a day or two, you should use a conditioner such as ground grain or molasses. Ground earcorn is the standard grain to use in Ohio, but oats, barley, or wheat will work if available at the right price."

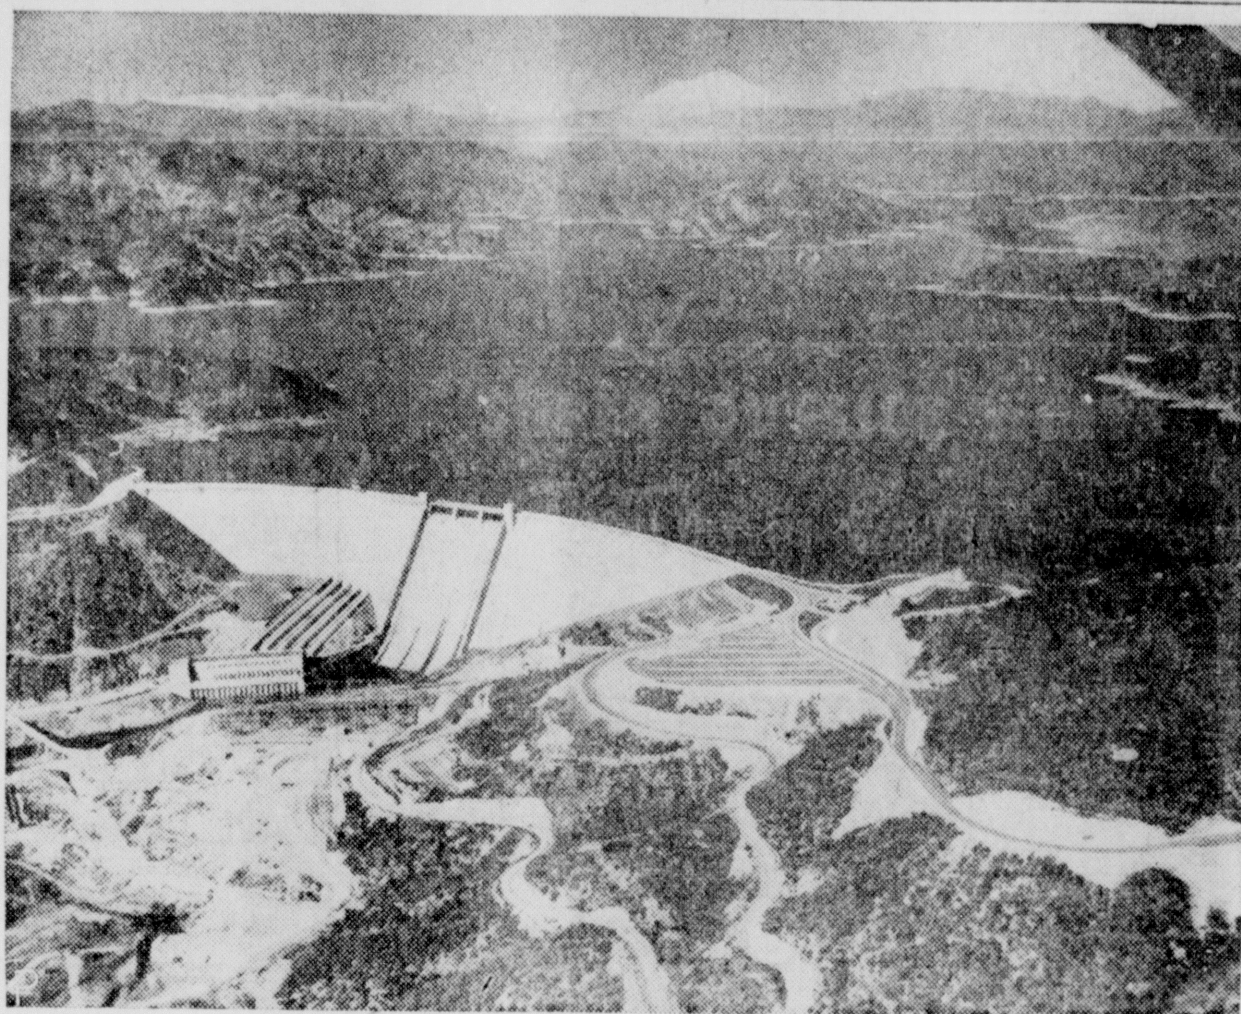

In addition, it is necessary to take every precaution with the crop—that it is evenly distributed, that the topfill is well tramped for at least the top three doors, and that the final surface is well tramped several times a day for a number of days, or otherwise protected.

CONDITIONERS do not cause crops to keep in the silo; in fact there is some evidence that silages made with molasses will spoil more, and faster, in air than those made without.

With young green crops it is well to use at least 150 to 175 pounds of ground grain, decreasing this amount as moistness decreases or age of the crop increases. About 100 pounds per ton green crop that is just right seems to work well. Add any conditioners used at the blower. Molasses at the rate of 60 pounds per ton of green crops is a good maximum to work down from.

"Molasses can be a useful added conditioner for meadow crops for silage," says Rogers. Molasses or ground grain treatments of the meadow crops is good insurance for quality, but do not insure against spoilage when conditions for spoilage exist. They are, therefore, added conditioners rather than preservatives."

The good taste of molasses and the flavor it imparts to wet crops ensiled in early Summer are reasons for its use.

It also helps strongly wilted meadow crops to compact better and gives them good flavors. Flatness of taste and too little compaction may reduce silage qualities if uncorrected.

Molasses also has high nutritional value. It is rich in sugar, has some protein, and considerable mineral content of the kinds animals need. Much of the feed value of molasses remains as long as the juices do not escape from the plant materials ensiled.

Four or five gallons of molasses per ton of young green crops is ample. As crops mature, use less. When necessary to dilute for gravity flow, dilute with not more than an equal volume of water.

Soviets Claim War Avoidance Up To America

The self-described "peace loving" Soviet nation asserts that "it is up to the American people if a third world conflict is to be avoided" and advised "throw out the imperialist American leaders!"

Such is the tone of short-wave broadcasts from Moscow, which, according to local short-wave monitors, have recently been stepped up in tempo.

Strongly reminiscent of Nazi propaganda during World War II the transmissions are in English. Announcers are alternately men and women whose talks are interspersed with stirring military music.

Charles Diehlman of South Pickaway street, who makes shortwave broadcast listening a hobby, has reported as many as seven simultaneous broadcasts out of the Kremlin, all pouring out anti-Western Power propaganda.

Typical excerpts from the Soviet broadcasts heard here follow:

"British and American war-mongers, imperialists, are wrecking the United Nations."

"Outlaw and destroy the A-bomb—U. S. workers all agree they do not want A-bomb."

"German youth tell Stalin they will not be used by Western Powers and never will fight against their benefactors—Soviet Russia."

"Western Germany is being used by Western Allies as spring-board for aggression."

"Truman — 'war-mongering speeches — 'trickery' — classified as war criminal."

"America headed for economic crisis — present production upturn only temporary, and due only to resumed coal production."

"During recent meeting of Acheson, Bevin and Schuman, the war-mongers laid down their aggressive plans."

"The modern cannibals are dangling A-bomb over the world."

"Down with the dirty schemes of the war-mongers!"

"U. S. boys raised to shoulder arms — Soviet youth taught reconstruction and achievement."

First war newscasters were taken by Elmer Underwood in 1897 during the Greco-Turkish war.

Soviets Claim War Avoidance Up To America

The self-described "peace loving" Soviet nation asserts that "it is up to the American people if a third world conflict is to be avoided" and advised "throw out the imperialist American leaders!"

Such is the tone of short-wave broadcasts from Moscow, which, according to local short-wave monitors, have recently been stepped up in tempo.

Strongly reminiscent of Nazi propaganda during World War II the transmissions are in English. Announcers are alternately men and women whose talks are interspersed with stirring military music.

Charles Diehlman of South Pickaway street, who makes shortwave broadcast listening a hobby, has reported as many as seven simultaneous broadcasts out of the Kremlin, all pouring out anti-Western Power propaganda.

Typical excerpts from the Soviet broadcasts heard here follow:

"British and American warmongers, imperialists, are wrecking the United Nations."

"Outlaw and destroy the A-bomb—U. S. workers all agree they do not want A-bomb."

"German youth tell Stalin they will not be used by Western Powers and never will fight against their benefactors—Soviet Russia."

"Western Germany is being used by Western Allies as spring-board for aggression."

"Truman — 'war-mongering speeches — 'trickery' — classified as war criminal."

"America headed for economic crisis — present production upturn only temporary, and due only to resumed coal production."

"During recent meeting of Acheson, Bevin and Schuman, the war-mongers laid down their aggressive plans."

"The modern cannibals are dangling A-bomb over the world."

"Down with the dirty schemes of the war-mongers!"

"U. S. boys raised to shoulder arms — Soviet youth taught reconstruction and achievement."

First war news pictures were taken by Elmer Underwood in 1897 during the Greco-Turkish war.
